Youth Achievement Award Honorees

Fred J. Epstein Youth Achievement Award

Serena Chen, Milpitas, CA

This year’s 2021 Fred J. Epstein Youth Achievement Award winner, Serena Chen, uses the Chinese phrase wen ti, which means “question” or “problem” with precision and poetry to help navigate how she sees herself and how others consider her. Saddled with ADHD and multiple additional diagnostic challenges, Serena has risen well beyond expectations and is a true champion of neurodiverse people. She is the founder and coordinator of NeurodiverCity, www.neurodiver-city.org, an international student community website of support and information from experts on being neurodiverse. In addition to maintaining a higher than 4.0 GPA and outstanding scores on the SAT, Serena has excelled in online coursework certifications, including Psychotherapy, Cognitive-Behavioral Therapy and Psychodiagnostics. Music has played a significant role in Serena’s life. An accomplished musician, Serena plays trumpet and piano. It was by channeling her energy into practicing trumpet that Serena found the self-identity and confidence to cope with her disabilities and overcome academic obstacles. She has won many national and international music competitions, performed principal trumpet with the San Francisco Symphony and the National Honor Band at Carnegie Hall, and trained at some of the nation’s premier summer orchestral institutes such as Boston University’s Tanglewood Institute, Brevard Music Center and Interlochen Arts Camp. She looks forward to continuing her amazing achievements this fall when she enrolls in Columbia University’s class of 2025.

Special Recognition Winner

Kyla Walsh, Crestwood KY

Kyla has many talents and interests ranging from competitive horseback riding and modeling for the Helens Wells Agency, to volunteering for Equine Therapy. Who would know that from a very young age, she was challenged with ADHD, dysgraphia, and serious anxiety. Through years of professional help and her own determination, Kyla was able to overcome some of her issues and manage other learning challenges. She did not allow her struggle with written expression (Dysgraphia), to stop her from excelling in creatively expressing her thoughts and feelings. Kyla has been successful writing poems, short stories, screenplays and novels. She published a book of her poems titled Poems are my Pills and has another poetry book soon to be released this spring. It was important for her to inspire others who share her struggles to know they were not alone. Kyla won an award for best short story for "Monsters," published in Spectrum, her school’s literary magazine. She also served as creative consultant for her screenplay, Better, that was selected and produced by the Oldham County Performing Arts Center. All this while maintaining a 4.0 GPA! Kyla can hardly wait to continue on her journey, to major in Creative Writing in college and achieve her dream to become a successful and influential author.
Honorable Mention Winners

Ireland Bennett, Sandusky, OH

After years of battling with a school district that refused support, Ireland Bennett was granted a 504 plan in her first year of high school to accommodate her ADHD. Though she still struggled with school and suffered from anxiety, she discovered ways to compensate for her disability. Throughout it all, she channeled her frustrations into artwork, creating sophisticated fashion designs and graphics. She has developed a social media presence with many examples of her Cosplay costumes, elaborate costumes of male superheroes in female form. Because of her challenges, Ireland sees the world in a unique way and dreams of eradicating the stigma of difference through her designs. Ireland says, “I am extraordinary because unlike so many people, I have not only found my purpose, but I am living it.” Ireland will continue her pursuit by studying fashion and design at Kent State University this fall.

Edward R. Gibson, Lutherville, MD

Eddie’s achievements are impressive considering his early school experiences were not like those of his peers. He has memories of having to stay inside during recess to complete his work, while his friends went out to play. Furthermore, he did not receive access to services, which would have greatly helped him. Eddie writes, “Simply put, my teachers believed that someone couldn’t be both smart and dyslexic. This initial injustice sent me down a path of advocating for the rights of others.” So, while in middle school, Eddie learned about Decoding Dyslexia and “felt a calling” to join them and lobby Congress to pass the Research Excellence Advancement for Dyslexia Act (READ Act). He met and shared his story with Congressman Lamar Smith, the bill’s sponsor, who presented Eddie’s story on the House Floor as Congress prepared to vote. When the bill passed, Eddie realized a simple, but important truth, “Change begins with one person, and one person can make a difference.” Newly empowered, he challenged himself academically, and discovered his passion for learning Russian, an unusual penchant for a dyslexic! Meeting a diplomat at the US Embassy in Beijing on a class trip to China ignited Eddie’s dream to join the foreign service. Eddie begins that journey in the fall with a major in international relations at the University of Pennsylvania. His ultimate goal is to serve as a United States diplomat where he can continue advocating for change on an international level and strive to be an instrument of peace.
2021 Fred J. Epstein

Youth Achievement Award Honorees

Honorable Mention Winners

Cole Perry, New Albany, OH

Cole writes, “For as long as I can remember, my life has been affected by my learning differences.” He began school with an IEP for a stutter and was diagnosed with ADHD and dyslexia in third grade. Cole was well-below grade level in reading, distractible, and bullied for his differences, until his family made sacrifices to send him to a school that taught the way he learned. In this new environment, he learned how to read, organize his work and advocate for himself. Grateful for the opportunity for remediation, Cole thrived when he returned to public school in ninth grade. With a long-time interest in programming, driven by an online platform, Code Academy, Cole used his love of technology to help him with his organizational challenges. He created a simple mobile app to enter assignments and receive prompts to do the assignment. It worked for Cole and for his many friends with whom he shared the app. In fact, with persistence and a wish to help others, Prompt is now available for free on Google Play and Apple’s App Store. Cole acknowledges that, “It’s not like my learning differences just go away. I still have to work around them almost every day.” Using learning strategies he has honed, Cole currently looks forward to choosing among his many acceptances to top tech universities in the country. Cole says that his learning differences have taught him, “to persevere, to keep my head down and keep on trying,” and adds, “I have already proved to myself that I can be successful when I do.”

Lindsay Wheeler, Las Vegas, NV

After years of struggling through elementary and middle school with an IEP that didn’t seem to help, Lindsay and her mom traveled out of state to a neuropsychologist in California to discover her dyslexia diagnosis. As a result, Lindsay started intense educational therapy with a private specialist and writes, “A whole new world opened up for me, and for the first time in my life, learning became fun.” Having earned a 3.8 GPA her first semester of junior year, and with new-found confidence, Lindsay followed her passion for helping others by founding Project Dot, a non-profit that provides feminine hygiene supplies to homeless and low-income women and girls in her community. With grant funds, a website, marketing materials and partnerships with agencies in the city of Las Vegas, Lindsay coordinated the distribution of more than 5,500 Project Dot kits. Now excelling academically, Lindsay is taking a dual enrollment class at her local community college with plans to pursue a major in psychology in college. Lindsay hopes to “create a path where I can help others like me, while making sure that no one else falls through the cracks.”
Cole Perry, one of our 2021 Youth Achievement Award Honorable Mention winners, created a simple mobile App to enter homework assignments and receive prompts to do assignments. Please check out his App!

Prompt is a homework tracking app targeted at students that struggle with adhd. Prompt allows the user to create calendar events that remind them when to do the homework and when it is due.

Leslie Josel is an ADHD academic and parenting coach and an award-winning entrepreneur, who founded Order Out of Chaos – a virtual company whose mission is to help parents guide their students to success in learning and in life - when her son was first diagnosed with ADHD 17 years ago.

She is the creator of the award-winning Academic Planner: A Tool for Time Management®, and the award-winning author of 3 books including the recently published, “How to Do It Now Because it’s Not Going Away: An Expert Guide to Getting Stuff Done.”

Leslie writes the weekly “Dear ADHD Family Coach®” column for ADDitude Magazine, and speaks to audiences around the world. Her line of student organizing products – a collaboration with Samsill Corp – was released last year.

For the last five years, Leslie has been named by Global Gurus as one of the world’s top 20 Time Management experts, and has presented at many events for Smart Kids with LD.
Dave Sylvestro was a founding staff member of Eagle Hill School, Greenwich in 1975. He continued to work there and later, at The Southport School for 47 years as a teacher, coach, dorm supervisor, advisor, and Department Head of Psychology Services. He continues to provide part-time support for both students and parents as school psychologist at The Southport School.

Dave has served as Co-Chair of the Greenwich Youth Suicide Prevention Committee, on the board of the Greenwich Association of Public Schools, and on the advisory board of The Cedar School. He continues to speak both regionally and nationally -- including for the LDA (Learning Disabilities Association of America), SPEDNET Wilton, and Smart Kids with LD.

One former Southport School parent says, “Dave Sylvestro saved me. I clung to his Wednesday morning discussion groups for dear life, as he guided our family through difficult times, gradually and gently teaching us how to manage on our own.”

Dave holds a BA in Psychology from Trinity College, and an MA and CSP from Fairfield University. His wife, Lea has also been a teacher and Parent Liaison at Eagle Hill Greenwich and The Southport School; they have a son and daughter, and 3 grandchildren. He says, “I continue to be drawn to working with our kids because of their incredible courage, talent and spirit, and with their families for pretty much the same reasons.”
Dr. Chris Bogart is a licensed clinical psychologist, and the Co-Executive Director of the Sasco River Center in Darien, Wilton and Stamford, CT. He has worked with children, adolescents and parents for the past 25 years, conducting comprehensive psychoeducational and AD/HD evaluations as well as therapy services. He also provides program consultations to local schools, as well as supervision to doctoral students in psychology.

Chris serves as the Board President of Smart Kids with Learning Disabilities; as a member of the Board of Trustees for New Canaan Country School; and as a member of the Advisory Board for the Center for Sexual Assault Crisis Counseling and Education.

Prior to co-founding the Sasco River Center, Chris held clinical positions including staff psychologist at the Beth Israel Medical Center in New York City and Director of Psychology at the Rockland Children’s Psychiatric Center in Orangeburg, New York. He has provided numerous classes, lectures and training programs on topics including parent education, executive functions assessment and coaching, psychological testing, and stress management. He has also conducted research in areas including ADHD, Social Skills Training, and depression in children.

He received his undergraduate training at Georgetown University and his doctoral degree from The American University in 1986.

Enjoy a magical week for 8 in Cortona, a "jewel" among the medieval hill towns of Tuscany. The Casa San Marco, where you will spend 7 nights, occupies the top 2 floors of a 16th-century palazzo, with magnificent views of the valley and lake below. It includes 4 bedrooms, a remodeled kitchen, dining area and library, as well as “concierge service” by a local company. Cortona was made famous as the site of the film and book, “Under the Tuscan Sun” and offers an array of fine restaurants and shops, along with two museums and numerous historic sites. There is a 3-year expiration date.
4 Live Auction

Cruising the Long Island Sound

After this past year, what could be more relaxing than a 4-hour cruise for 6 people aboard Equilibrium, a 30-foot Grady with a cabin and head. Embarking from Greenwich or Cos Cob, you will enjoy cocktails, Prosecco, wine, and wonderful food as you spend 4 hours on the water - watching the sun set, viewing fireworks over Playland, or opting for a family day of swimming, exploring Great Captain's Island, kayaking, paddle boarding, and tubing! The owners will create an experience according to your wishes, including your choice of food. There is no expiration date, and no need to worry about the weather as you can adjust the date according to weather conditions.
